

Stellar Outcast I: Eternal War | Joe Lem

“That experience would change him forever, even though he didn't know it yet.”

It's been many decades since the planets Nuberu and Busgosu have collided. However, in all these years, no one in Nuberu could see anyone on Busgosu. In the meantime, young people are preparing to serve their land. Some people just want to destroy enemies. Among these patriots there is Andris Asera who, together with his group of soldiers and under the command of the Sergeant Bernius Kamea and the pilot Moris Maniani, will leave on a stellar trip, in an exciting and dangerous mission. Is this the beginning of an eternal war that is hiding mysterious unknown interests?

Joe Lem is the pseudonym chosen by Pedro González when he started writing science-fiction stories. It's the combination of two of his favourite science-fiction authors: Joe Haldeman and Stanislaw Lem. He graduated in Audiovisual Communication. For 13 years he has worked with medias. His texts show his ability to investigate and edit. He published his first novel in 2016, his second in 2018. This is his third work.
