

Beyond the oblivion | Jordi Marcé Llach

Aisha is an art conservator in Vatican City. Her mother is Sudanese and her father is a white Ethiopian. After many years, she was able to gather her family in Rome. In her free time, she collaborates with humanitarian projects for the whole world. Legstock is an ex Buddhist monk who lives in the mountains of Himalaya, in the village of Shanana. He's travelled a lot, and he's a meditation teacher in his town. During one of his long meditation sessions, a pure woman appears in front of him: she's from his past lives and his future, waiting for him, together with the love of his life.

Jordi is a man who is disappointed by life, he's fond of books and he works in a friend's library in Rome. He's desperately looking for love and, after every conquest, failure comes. He takes refuge in drugs and in the illusion of true love. Life brought these three people, absolute stranger to each other, together. After travels, meetings, ceremonies and experiences, they will discover an unimaginable life.
